advise their friends not to have Galvanized Sheet Iron put on their roofs, it breaks so badly. NEWS AND OTHER ITEMS.

You don't guide a hen by saying "Gee Henna."

The young lady who said that she was hungry enough to eat nails often makes such ironical remarks.

Inquirer: How can you manufacture an infernal machine? We don't know. Go to a hand-organ factory.

Young men should be careful about dropping remarks. They may be picked up by a bigger man.

Vessels coming south from Alaska report that fur-bearing seals are unusually abundant this season.

John B. Raymond, of Fargo, Dakota, says that he has harvested this season $50,000 worth of wheat from a farm that cost him only $50,000 two years ago.

Careful microscopic examination of the tomatoes in New Jersey which have been rotting extensively, shows that it is the work of insects and not a new disease.

"Malaria," said the Old Orchard Beach landlady; "well, no, haven't got it; folks hain't asked for it, but we'll get it for your family."

Tennessee has added to her industries that of pearl fishing, in which already five hundred people are engaged on a single river. The pearls are found in mussels.

The Kentucky distillers are troubled at the high price of corn and the low price of whisky, and are debating whether it will pay to make any more whisky at present.

Prof. N. N. Atkinson, at one time principal of Warner (N. H.) High School, and who lately, with a friend, discovered a gold vein in Nevada, has sold his share in the same for fifty thousand dollars.

The Tri-State Grangers' picnic was held during three or four days last week at Williams' Grove, Pa. Among the speakers was Dr. G. B. Loring, Commissioner of Agriculture. The exhibition of farm implements was very large.

Professor Ball claims that he has succeeded in inventing a machine that will "locate a bullet in the human body." He needn't think that's anything now. Almost every man in Denver totes such an instrument.

A man in North Salem, N. H., over forty years of age, when told by his aged father that he was tired of supporting him in idleness any longer, replied "that it was mighty hard for a child to be turned out of house and home, and that only a hard-hearted person would do it."

A black walnut tree was recently cut down in Kentucky that was eighteen feet in diameter. It was eighty feet to the first limb, which was about six feet in diameter. Its plank measurement is estimated at fifty thousand feet, with enough limbs for twenty-five cords of wood.

STATE NEWS.

The Journal says that Mr. C. W. Hill, of Auburn, was thrown from his carriage while riding in Oxford county, a few days since, and was quite seriously hurt, but is now able to be about.

Cumberland.

The evening train on the Portland and Rochester road ran into a flock of sheep between Westbrook Junction and Cumberland Mills, Monday night, and killed twelve of them.

The Press says a man giving the name of Stephen Beauchamp, was arrested, Tuesday, for deliberately stealing a watch from the pocket of Mr. Stone while he was sitting in a shop on Commercial street. Beauchamp has been hauled up once before.

Hancock.

The fall term of the Academy at Blue Hill opened, Monday, with twenty scholars.——The Reform Club propose to hold a public jubilee next Sunday. Speakers from Bucksport, Ellsworth and other places are expected.

Kennebec.

A correspondent to the Journal, writing from Readfield, says: The meeting of the Old Kennebec Agricultural Society, held at the Society's building, Sept. 5th, was the largest held for many years, and great interest was manifested in having one of the largest and best exhibitions they have ever had. This will be the semi-centennial exhibition. Mr. Bodwell, of Hallowell, will be here with his famous herd of imported stock, not entering them for premiums, but to give the people a chance to see what can be done in making improvements in stock. The officers and members of the Board of Agriculture of the State of Maine, are intending to be present. The Society has been fortunate in obtaining Judge E. G. Bean as historian and R. W. Soule, Esq., poet. The agent was instructed to procure a band for two days.

J. H. McKay, of Vassalboro, engaged in raising the road bed, got his hand car dumped, last Saturday, while trying to run away from a coal train which he met on the track. His crew jumped from the car and escaped injury, except Mr. Estes, who had one leg hurt, but not very seriously.——Much grain and second crop hay which are cut are being injured by the rain.

Lincoln.

The seventeenth annual convention of the Knox and Lincoln Musical Association, opened in Lincoln Hall, in Damariscotta, Tuesday. Prof. L. A. Torrens, of Boston, conducts, and is giving general satisfaction. The class numbers eighty, and there will probably be large accession, Wednesday.

Oxford.

The Democrat says that Oxford county Court sits Sept. 20th, with Judge Peters on the bench. Probate Court, under Judge Frye, will be in session the same day.

Somerset.

By the assistance of Prof. G. A. Stuart, of North Anson Academy, a live working teacher's association was organized at North New Portland, a few weeks since. The association has since held weekly meetings, with steady increase of interest and attendance. The next meeting will be held Saturday, Sept. 10th, at 7 P. M.

York.

A sad death occurred at Old Orchard, Monday night. Miss Fannie Backus, of Boston, who entertained so many people during the season with her delightful readings, was taken with slow fever a week or so ago, and died on Monday night. She was an only child and leaves many friends to mourn her loss. As an elocutionist she had attracted considerable notice in Boston and her sudden death will call forth many regrets.

The York County Fair will be held at Saco and Biddeford, Sept. 27-29; the fair in the City Hall, Saco, and stock show at Biddeford Riding Park. About $350 are offered in prizes for the races, which are to take place each afternoon during the fair.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

OLD COLONY LAWS.

Theodore Parker said that our reverence for the past is just in proportion to our ignorance of it. One might think so from an examination of the earlier laws of the country. Certainly, an evolution in statutory creation has been going on in a remarkable degree.

A book called "Laws and Liberties of the Massachusetts Colonies," revised in 1672, presents abundant curiosities to those who are thoughtful of the changes (mostly progressive) which have been wrought out in the last century or two by the English race. Your columns may have room for a slice of a few of the quaint and queer law of the seventeenth century, to show the great contrasts between the notions of those days and now.

In 1641, it was legislated that, in case of a defect of a law to apply to any particular matter in court, it should be decided by the word of God." In such case, it would seem that the judges should be of no faith only, and more theologically vested than is often the fact to this day.

In 1641, a poor-debtor disclosure was passed. The debtor without property could be discharged from imprisonment, "but shall satisfy by service to the Creditor require it;" but shall not be sold to any but of the English Nation."

The law of 1651 provided that "No person should undertake the calling of Brewer or Beer for Sale, but only such as are known to have sufficient skill and knowledge in the Art and Mystery of a Brewer." That would be excellent law now, and be likely to ensure excellent Beer, for "medicinal or mechanical purposes."

A Burglar was for first offence to be branded with the letter B; for second offence, to be thus branded and severely whipped; for the third offence, "he shall put to death as being incorrigible;" If offence should be committed on the Lord's day, one ear was to be cut off for the first offence, and two ears for the second, as cumulative punishments. I suppose Ingersoll, the infidelic controversialist, would say that the Lord should manage to have a person born without ears, who was predestined to Burglary. Some of these laws would be hard on Ingersoll, as will be seen further on.

Capital Punishment included a long list of offences. Among them was Idolatry, defined to be "the worship of any God but the Lord, God," which would now seem rather ignorant terms. The same punishment included Witchcraft, Blasphemy, Bestiality, Sodomy. And for Adultery both a married or an "espoused" wife the penalty was Death.

How would that penalty, if now strictly applied to all cases of the latter offence affect the question of an increase of our criminal population? Any child above six years old could be put to death for either striking or smiting their natural father or mother.

Taxes were not so high as they are under Hatch and associates, our beloved Bangor assessors. Generally, one penny for every twenty shillings earned, but "Merchants and others (to be taxed) at the Will and Doom of the assessors."

"All Masters of families" were required to Catechise their children and servants in the grounds and Principles of Religion once a week at the least." That would be a good law now, wouldn't it? It might be required of our officials who employ men, such as street commissioner and other minor majesties.

The official oath taken then might rather depress its takers now: "I doo sweare by the most great and dreadfull Name of the everlasting God."

Church members could be admitted as freeman, by taking suitable oath. But a freeman could not be a member of the General Court, "if dissenting in judgment, concerning the main points of the Christian Religion, as they have been held forth and acknowledged by the generality of the orthodox Protestant writers."

"Absence from Church on Lord's dayes" or "Fast dayes or dayes of Thanksgiving as are to be observed by appointment of authority," was punishable. That would hit editors now-a-days, and especially the WHIG & COURIER editor, unless the day appointed by our present pious governor was concurred in by his council.

There was, however, a due compensation for compulsory church-attendance in a law which provided for an "able minister in all sections."

Quakers could not vote, and were subject to fines and mulcts" for "obstinate perseuing in wicked wayes and courses." Quakers were persecuted in about all conceivable forms.

"Heresie error" was punished by banishment or death. Ingersoll couldn't have proclaimed himself on Massachusetts soil those "dayes." It was criminal for "the commander of any ship, Barque, Pinnace, Ketch or other vessel to conceal or entertain any of the "cursed sect of heretickes," to "import into any Harbour any Quaker Books or Writings, concerning their damnable tenents." One of the punishments of the day for "Blasphemous Heretickes," was to be "whipped through the Towns, stripped naked from the middle upwards, and tyed to a cart's tail."

Our ancestors were afraid of the Pope, Jesuits or ecclesiastical or spiritual persons ordained by the authority of the Pope or See of Room shall not repair to or come within the jurisdiction." Such persons could be arrested upon suspicion, and were to be banished, unless they could clear themselves; "but if cast upon our shores by ship-wrack or other accident," were allowed time "to clear out."

There was a "Penalty against keeping Christmas as being in dishonor of God." It was death to deny a word spoken in either the old or new testament. And now a new has been amended to ten thousand particulars. The late council of revisers could in that day all have been hanged for blasphemy."

It was provided that "any person who should contemptuously behave himself towards the word preached or the Messenger thereof, shall stand, on a lecture day, in open and openly on a Block or Stool 4 feet high, with a paper fixed upon his breast, written in Capital Letters, An open and obstinate Contemner of God's Holy Ordinances.

After the year 1633 Indians were not allowed to "Powaw." It was decreed that Indians should not be allowed to "Powaw their false Gods or to the Devil," and each transgression "the Powawer shall pay five shillings;" and power was given Townes in general terms "to restrain all Indians from prophaning the Lord's day." Should the charge! As I write these words, on the Lord's day, within the sound of the music of the church, a boy goes by, "owawing" the Boston Herald at the top of his mouth, and certainly the Sunday Herald must be deemed to be sometimes instrumentality of the old Colonial evil. Worse than all that, this writer should be punishable with death perhaps for indicting this article on a Sunday, and it would be a criminal to print it. But the world moves—away from the theological eccentricities of the "old Colony days."

But the legislation was not all theological. "For the support of government and Maintenance of Fortification," in 1645, an impost was laid (except they come directly from England as their first Port) "on Wines and Strong Waters (Rums), including Sherry, Sack, Malaga, or Canary Wines, Muscadels, Malmsies, Bastards, Teints and Alligants." Probably the saloon-keepers in Bangor would be dumbfounded by a customer's calling for a drink of Teints or Alligants," though some of them sell liquids which would satisfy the drinker in seeing alligators and other animals.

A mint was established upon Greenback theories. History repeats itself. Laborers' wages were payable in corn. Taxes were payable in coin. Every country that abuses the right of creditors, takes care of itself. All other debts were payable to the extent of 40 shillings "in Wampampeag," "the white to be taken at 8 a penny, the black at 4." But this law, passed in 1643, as repealed in 1681.

Convicted criminals could be tortured to confess their co-conspirators.

Here is a grand good law: "No man shall take any tobacco within 20 Poles of any house." Liquors inside of house were regarded as less dangerous. Playing at cards or dice, games of shuffle-board, etc., were prohibited in "Ordinaries" (inns) "whereby much precious time is spent unprofitably, and much waste of time and beer occasioned."

In 1668 a law provided that "no mackerell shall be caught, except for spending whilst fresh, before the first of July annually." How little the Colony men knew of the contents of the Ocean. They were afraid of its depletion. A similar sentiment prevails now respecting fisheries generally. And in this connection, it may be well to note what Prof. Huxley, as the head of a commission to report whether the excessive fishing of the herring would in time drive that fish from the sea, says in his report, and the only advice he gives: "Let people fish how they like, as they like, and when they like."

In "the election of publick officers," Freemen were required to use "Indian corn and Beans," "the Indian corn to manifest election, the Beans contrary." Gargelon's dareful devils would have substituted Beans for the corn, had they been there, not caring Beans whether an election were manifested or not.

Here is a very decent law passed in 1641. "It is ordered, that this court hereafter will grant no benevolence, except in foreign occasions, and when there is money in the treasury sufficient, and our debts first satisfied."

Constables were required to raise "Hues and Cryes" when an offence was committed. Now-a-days, the other fellows raise the Hues and Cryes, to arouse transgressors that the constables are around.

Here (in 1647) was a good law, all but the punishment of striking, back—"No man shall strike his wife, nor any woman her husband, under liability of corporal punishment."

Here is something that is law to-day in all English Courts: "In 1675, it was resolved by the general Court not to be lawful for a man to marry with her that was his first wife's natural sister."

Tramps were proceeded against as Rogues and Vagabonds, and corporally punished by order of magistrates, and sent from Constable to Constable until they came to their place of abode.

Slander was disliked. "Exorbitancy of the tongue in railing and scolding," was punishable "by gagging or setting in a ducking stool."

But what an increase in the means and material of life since 1651. Then the lawmakers undertook to regulate the expensiveness of clothing to be worn. They declared their "detestation and dislike, that men of mean condition, should take upon them the garb of gentlemen, by wearing gold or silver lace or Buttons, or points at their knees, or to walk in great boots; or women of the same rank to wear silk or Tiffany hoods, or Scarfes, which though allowable to persons of greater estates, or more liberal education, yet we cannot but judge it intolerable in persons of such like condition;" and so it was legislated that such excesses should be restrained by the selectmen of towns in the case of persons not worth the "true and indifferent value of 200 pounds." But to this was an exception in the case of a "Soldier in the time of military service, or any other whose education and employment have been above the ordinary degree, or whose estate have been considerable, though now decayed."

But of all changes in public sentiment, none exceeds that upon the subject of "Self Murther." The other day all of the Massachusetts Courts and Bars were paying funeral honors and bestowing benediction upon Judge Colt, who suicided himself. In 1660, the Colonial general court declared as follows: "This court considering how far Satan doth prevail upon several persons within his jurisdiction, to make away with themselves, judgeth that God calls them to bear testimony against such wicked and unnatural practices, that others may be deburred therefrom:—Do therefore order, that from henceforth if any person, inhabitant, or stranger, shall at any time be found by any jury to lay violent hands on themselves, or be wilfully guilty of their own death, every such person shall be denied the privilege of being buried in the common burying place of Christians, but shall be buried in some common highway where the selectmen of the town where such person did inhabit shall appoint, and a Cart load of stones laid upon the grave as a brand of infamy, and as a warning to others to beware of the like detestable practices."

But, Mr. Editor, if I go on, I shall not only fill but burst your borders.

LAW.

THE ENGINEER AND THE ENGINE.

THE MAN WHO MANAGED THE LOCOMOTIVE TELLS THE STORY OF THE RUN.

[Special Dispatch to the Boston Journal.]

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6. Engineer Page was the man who brought the President through safely to-day. He was a most striking figure on the train as he rushed up in front of the Elberon this afternoon, his long beard floating in the wind which was blowing in from the sea. His swarthy face was covered with dirt and cinders. He stood erect and firm, and with an air of pride in every feature that showed he was conscious of a duty well performed. A representative of the Journal boarded the engine and moved out from the Elberon to the West End Hotel station, and during that short ride had a chat with him about the trip.

"Did she behave well on the trip?" was asked. "Behave well? I should say so. She seemed to feel all that was required of her. While on ordinary occasions I take her over the road she starts off with a jerk like, and, raising herself, goes galloping down, puffing and snorting. But this morning she glided away as gently as a ladies' mare. And even when I put her to her best she went on at the rate of a mile in 53 seconds. She seemed to hold her breath."

As he said this he leaned out of the cab and looked at his engine as friendly as a rider would at his favorite horse.

"Then you did not limit the speed to 45 miles an hour, which was intended?"

"Oh! no; that, you see, would only have been three-quarters of a mile to a minute, and a good deal of the way we made more than a mile a minute."

"Did the doctors and the President know you were going at that speed?"

"They did not the first time. I let her go, and I tell you how I came to do it. We left Washington at 6.37 this morning. We ran down to Patapsco, 37 miles out, at the limited rate. There we stopped three minutes. This stop, like all the other stops made on the way, was made to change cars, to water, and allow the physicians to attend on the President. I saw one of the attendants, I guess it was Col. Rockwell, coming down the platform, and I called out to him, 'How is the President?' You see, though I was not sure who he was, I felt kind of safe in calling him Colonel. 'He is doing finely, Page,' came back the answer. 'And does he feel the motion?' I asked. 'Not at all; why, you are going as smoothly as a carriage over an asphalt pavement.'"

"Was it then you began to think of running a little faster?" "Well, yes; but as Bay View, our next stopping place, was only eight miles further, I did not try until we started from Bay View for Perryville, seventy-eight miles out from Washington. They sent word that the President had been doing better and better as the distance from the White House was increasing, so I thought I should watch the engine, and if she went smoothly try one mile a little faster. Lamoken, the next halt, was forty-six miles further on. The engine behaved beautifully, and it was half way between Bay View and Lamoken that I went on the trial and went one mile in fifty-three seconds. I did not feel a jolt or jar as she went tearing down the track, but I knew then, if the President had a mind, he might get the sea breezes sooner. We stopped eight minutes at Lamoken. I called out to one of the attendants, 'Did you notice any extra motion when we were going faster?' 'Why, no,' was the reply; 'were we traveling faster than 45 miles an hour?' 'Yes, sir,' says I, 'we went one mile in 53 seconds.' 'Well,' said he, 'I did not notice it, and I am sure the President did not; I will go and ask.' Pretty soon I saw him coming down the platform. 'Page, whip her up,' he called out, 'the President did not feel any extra motion; they were all delighted to hear that we were getting along faster and the President says go ahead; I want to get there.' 'Does he continue to improve?' I asked. 'Yes; he said a short time ago, I feel as if I were on the road to recovery.'"

"After these stops you went pretty much at the speed you thought best, according to your knowledge of the road?"

"Pretty much as I thought best, and the engine behaved well right straight through to Elberon. Yes, sir, right straight through. She ran more smoothly than she is running now, I warrant you, and not being much shaken up at this moment."

"I suppose after this she will be the most famous engine on the road?"

"Yes, sir; and she ought to be. I guess she gained a national reputation to-day."

"How many more long stops did you make after Lamoken?"

"After we stopped seven minutes at Gray's Ferry, which is 30 miles out, and eight minutes at Tulleytown—but see there, I have written it out on a slip of paper."

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard College has a building fund of $3,530.

Last month's receipts at the Boston Custom house amounted to $2,313,194, an increase of $348,467 over August, 1880.

A Boston paper says that vacant dwelling houses in that city are scarce and rents are advancing under the Fall demand.

The Hon. Henry B. Curtis, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, has presented Kenyon College with $15,000 for the endowment of scholarships.

The will of the late George Cummings, of Medfield, Mass., bequeaths $1,000 to the public library and $4,000 to the Baptist Society of that place.

The Graphic thinks that the Sun ought to say a good word for the Apaches, "who are doing what the Sun has been trying to accomplish, viz., reducing the army.

Mr. John W. Garrett is to present the City of Baltimore with a $20,000 fountain, adorned with figures in bronze. It will be set up in Washington place, between Charles and St. Paul streets.

"Assassination has never changed the history of the world." That was what Disraeli said when Lincoln was shot down. If he had lived to see these sad days, his opinion would only have been emphasized.

Mr. Watterson of Louisville is nothing if not original. He has just announced that Dr. Loring, the commissioner of agriculture, "is inimical to the interests of agricultural communities." Tell it not at the cattle shows.

In responding to the congratulations of Miss Susan B. Anthony, his cousin, Senator-elect Lapham recently wrote: "Of the future, I have hope that our country will prosper, and that woman will yet be accorded her rights."

In mentioning Gen. Joseph E. Johnston's visit to the White House last week the Richmond Dispatch says: "We heard Mr. Garfield once pay him on the floor of the House a compliment that was as graceful as it was merited."

Ex-Senator James Harlan has been nominated for the Senate of Iowa by the Republicans of Henry County. By the accident of a dead-lock he was induced to permit his name to be used. He was not in the State, nor was he a candidate.

The tolling of church bells in Westfield, Mass., for a lost six-year old boy about 10:30 Thursday night startled all hearers into thinking President Garfield was dead and drew many out into the streets. After searching all about town for the child he was found asleep under a tree in his father's garden.

Fred Douglass says that, when he was abroad, although much in the society of lords and ladies, he never saw the slightest indication of aversion to him on account of his color. Prejudice on account of color is absurd and silly; but the silliest and the absurder a prejudice one has, the harder it is to rid one's self of it.

A paper published in Sacramento, Cal., says that the recent greatly increased cost of administering the county Government will require a tax of not less than 2 per cent. for county purposes the present year, making the total tax upon property within the city 4 per cent. or more. Moreover, it is stated that this rate of taxation must continue for years to come.

CHEERING NEWS.

In Better Condition Than for Ten Days.

A GOOD APPETITE AND A RELISH FOR FOOD.

A DECIDED CHANGE IN THE WEATHER.

The Surgeons Much Encouraged.

The President Convalescent.

SO SAYS DR. BLISS.

OFFICIAL.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 8

At the morning examination, the President's pulse was 104, temperature 98 7, respiration 18 He was restless and woke at midnight slept well until morning. His general condition appears more encouraging

(Signed) D W. BLISS,
FRANK H HAMILTON

[9 30 A M.]

UNOFFICIAL.

The Morning Opens Favorably

Dr. Reyburn, said this morning that the President was restless during the early part of the night, but that he slept well after midnight slept well until morning. His condition is in better condition this morning than for ten days Pulse 104, temperature and respiration about normal

[12—NOON.]

The President's Appetite Much Better

The President's appetite was much better this morning When given some chicken he remarked to his wife, that he fest as if he could eat it all. This is one of the most desirable indications. If the patient's appetite returns the attending surgeons will be more sanguine Dr Hamilton, while declining to talk for publication this morning, indicated by his remarks that he felt very much encouraged with the case at present The Cabinet officers are much encouraged with this morning's bulletin but are among the number who are anxiously awaiting cooler weather Remarks such as, "Hate seems to be against the President," and, "How is it possible for him to improve with such unfavorable weather," are heard on all sides

[12 10 P. M.]

OFFICIAL

The Best Showing for Some Days

Dr. Bliss, who has just made an examination of the President says that his pulse is 94, temperature normal and respiration 17. "This," says the Doctor, "is the best showing we have had at noon for some days" The announcement of the figures was received with great satisfaction by all gathered about the Elberon Hotel Attorney-General MacVeagh expressed the opinion that there was now apparently good ground for encouragement.

[1.10 P. M.]

Condition Better than Yesterday

Dr Reyburn considered the President's condition this morning as better than yesterday. His unusual restlessness during the early part of the night is attributed to the intense heat of yesterday To-day it is not quite so close, the wind having shifted to the northeast Cooler weather is anxiously looked for and it is thought that with it will come a favorable change for the President There is much comment on the retirement of three of the attending surgeons and some are inclined to believe that the matter is extraordinary and surrounded by mystery. Information from an authoritative source, however, does not appear to warrant any such opinion Mrs. Dr. Edson, one of the nurses, also retires from her duties in that capacity to-day, and she and Drs. Woodward and Hamilton expect to leave the Branch to-day. This movement is explained by those in position to know by the statement that the President recently informed his wife that he would prefer having all male attendants

[AFTERNOON.]

A Cheering Dispatch—The President Said to be Convalescent.

The favorable condition of the President at the noon examination continues, and has had the effect of cheering all hearts. The feeling in all quarters has changed from one of anxiety to the most sanguine opinions that the President has fairly started on the road to recovery. Dr. Bliss is authority for the statement that the President is convalescent. There appears to be good ground for believing that the rally will be maintained, inasmuch as the wind has shifted to the east, and a stiff and invigorating sea breeze is blowing, and the atmosphere consequently perfectly pure. Dr. Bliss says the wound and gland are both in excellent condition and there are, at present, no unfavorable symptoms Mrs Garfield, the doctor says, is extremely happy over the sudden change for the better which has taken place.

[5 30 P M.]

OFFICIAL.

At 12 to-day the President's temperature was 98 4 pulse 94, respiration 17. At the evening dressing at 5 30 P. M temperature 99 1, pulse 100, respiration 18 He has taken a liberal amount of food, both solid and fluid, with apparent relish. By the special request of the President it has been made our duty to say in this public way to Surgeon General J. K. Barnes, Surgeon J. J. Woodward, and Dr. Robert Reyburn, that in dispensing with their services as his medical attendants, the President was actuated only by the wish to relieve them of labor and responsibility which in his improved condition he could no longer properly impose upon them. Both President and Mrs. Garfield desire to express to these gentlemen personally, and in the same public manner, their high appreciation of the great skill and discretion which they have so constantly exercised as associate counsel in the management of his case up to the present time.

D. W. BLISS
F. H. HAMILTON

[10 P. M.]

Everything Looking Well.

At ten to-night Dr. Bliss stated that the President's pulse had risen to 108 since the evening bulletin This is attributed to the usual febrile rise and occasions little or no apprehension. Dr. Hamilton said everything looked well and the case was very promising.

[10 30 P. M.]

Blaine to Lowell.

LONG BRANCH, Sept 8.

The following was sent at 10 30 o'clock to-night:

To Lowell, Minister at London

The President's rest was much broken during the first half of last night, but to-day his condition has been more favorable. He had less fever this afternoon than for several days past, has a better pulse and improved appetite. The surgeons are much encouraged. His comfort has been promoted by a decided change in the weather. Thermometer at this hour 75° Fahrenheit; yesterday it was 93°.

(Signed) BLAINE, Secretary.

[EVENING.]

Cheering Review of the Day.

The day opened warm and sultry and although a trifle cooler than yesterday the heat was very oppressive and the atmosphere smoky and unpleasant. Much anxiety was felt with regard to the effect of the continued heat on the President. This morning and at noon Dr. Bliss says the President was in a more favorable condition than for a week or ten days. Miss Edson returned to Washington this morning. Her withdrawal from the case was merely to please the President in his request that his attendants henceforth should be males. Drs. Barnes and Woodward also left for Washington this morning.

Dr. Bliss says "The pure atmosphere is commencing to have its effects. This extraordinary change indicates convalescence, and there is every indication that it will be permanent. The gland and wound are both doing well. We will be able to get the President in a condition to make a communication to Congress, if this continues No whiskey has been given since last night I have stepped the enema, and shall not give any more unless it becomes necessary. The patient to-day had some woodcock, beef extract, milk porridge and some toast. He takes it with great relish He could eat more than would be good for him This is the first time he has really relished his food for some time."

Friday Morning

[1 A M]

A False Rumor

A rumor prevailed late to-night that the President had vomited during the evening It is believed it originated from the fact that he ate a little too heartily and was somewhat restless The attending surgeons deny that any vomiting occurred.

A very forcible illustration of the extreme carelessness of those who send valuable letters may be deduced from the fact that a New York paper not long ago published a list of one hundred and fifty letters which they had received (each containing from three to eight dollars), but could not answer for the following potent reasons Twenty five of them had no signature, eighty had no signature but no address, forty had the name of the town but not the State, while the other five had neither address or signature.

AN OLD COIN. We were shown yesterday a French silver coin bearing date of 1693, and consequently, one hundred and ninety-one years old The coin is in a fine state of preservation, the date and inscriptions being remarkably plain. The date of the issue was during the war between France, Spain and Italy on the one side, and England, under William III, Prince of Orange on the other, and which continued from 1689 until 1697. It is an interesting relic

A CONTEMPTIBLE PETTY THIEF A thievish "dead beat," who has given his name as John Judkins, has successfully practiced his contemptible tricks upon several charitably disposed persons in this city and vicinity A private letter received from Waterville states that he visited that place on Friday last. He told a pitiful and plausible story, was destitute and in need of work A gentleman interested himself in Judkins's behalf, obtained employment for him at two dollars per day, and then invited him to his own home with the understanding that he could remain there until Monday, when he was to commence work Monday morning came but Judkins had vamosed, taking with him certain articles of wearing apparel belonging to his benefactor and seven dollars in money belonging to another gentleman While in this city he stole several sums of money from various parties who had befriended him Beware of "Judkin"

SHAW BROTHERS' BARK EXTRACT FACTORY BURNED Messrs Shaw Bros' extensive hemlock bark extract factory at Poolak, 3d miles above Fredericton, was totally destroyed by fire, which broke out at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning The origin of the fire is assigned to incendiarism The loss is very heavy The insurance is said to amount to $10 000 Nothing was saved from the building A large number of men are thrown out of employment but rebuilding will be commenced very soon The factory has not been running for two weeks, having been suspended to allow the introduction of new machinery worth $1 000 which was completed only Monday night and the factory would have been in operation again this week The building which was scarcely two years old, was about 100 feet long by 50 feet wide and three stories high There was no fire about it and the fact of its having been virtually closed for a fortnight gives strong color to the theory of incendiarism

PRAYING FOR THE PRESIDENT

Impressive Services in the Churches Yesterday

The hours from ten o'clock in the forenoon until twelve, noon yesterday, having been set apart by a proclamation of the Governor as a season for humiliation, fasting and supplication to Almighty God for the stricken President's recovery, our citizens generally assembled at the various places of worship in this city, at the summons of the church bells The services were impressive and of deep solemnity The most fervent petitions for the President's speedy recovery ascended to the Throne of Mercy. The stores were nearly all closed and business was generally suspended. From the cheering reports from Long Branch, concerning the President's condition, received yesterday, it would seem that the earnest prayers of the people were to be speedily answered, and we thank God for the hope inspired

AT THE CENTRAL CHURCH

By ten o'clock the vestry of this church was nearly filled, the members of the First church uniting with the church in the services of the hour. The assemblage was largely composed of leading citizens, including many ladies. The Rev. Geo. W. Field, pastor of the church, in a brief address which was full of eloquence and feeling and highly appropriate to the occasion, explained the meaning and purpose of prayer. Urgent and prayerful appeals to God were made by a large number of persons present, asking that the President's life might be spared and his speedy restoration to health assured The fervent supplications were interspersed with singing, concluding with the beautiful hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

HAMMOND STREET CHURCH.

The service at the special meeting of the Hammond street church was conducted by Prof. Stearns of the Theological Seminary. Profs. Stearns and Paine and Rev. Mr. Risley made feeling remarks pertinent to the occasion, and earnest prayers were offered by members of the congregation and by the clergymen present. The services included the singing of several appropriate hymns.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. F. T. Hazlewood, pastor of the First Baptist church, paid an eloquent tribute to the President as a man, and spoke feelingly of the occasion. His prayer for the recovery of the President was marked for its fervency. Many others in the meeting offered prayers. An appropriate selection of hymns was sung.

THE UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

The services at this church were impressive. The remarks by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Jowell, were most eloquent and appropriate. The preservation of the President's precious life was the burden of the petitions that fell from the lips of the pastor and the members of the congregation.

The Maine Historical Society

[From the Portland Press.]

Among the appendages of our city the establishment of the headquarters of this institution here is one of the most important, and the acquisition is a very valuable one It has already appeared that a new impulse has been given to local historical research, and at no period have its friends been so zealous and persevering in its work as since the removal Though in no way connected with it, the writer may perhaps be pardoned for suggesting to those who are, that an important field is open to them in collecting materials for better perpetuating the fame of Maine's most distinguished sons, whose names have never had justice done them, and whose service merits a high place in the historic annals of our State. Unfortunately for them and for the public, the tendency at home has been to belittle the character and services of Maine celebrities This has arisen, not for want of ample material with which to adorn our local history, but must be attributed to the intensity of partizanship which has always characterized the State long anterior to its birth and down to the present time The result is, the present generation is not so well impressed as it should be with the fact, that a faithful study of the biographical history of our own men will justify both the wisdom and propriety of the inscription on our State escutcheon of the inspiring word "Dirigo"

To verify this statement is not the purpose of these observations, but to invite others to do so, or else to admit that the fathers made a mistake in selecting their state motto Besides the work of perpetuation, occasions not unfrequently arise for vindication of our public men A recent illustration is in point The August number of Harper contains an elaborate article on the surrender of Cornwallis, and our Maine veterans have just honored themselves and the state by giving to 40 000 people a graphic description of the siege of Yorktown. In reading that article, a Maine man naturally looked for some notice of one of the most important personages who figured in that occasion, and whose services were second to those of no other in effecting the conquest of Cornwallis and his army. But Gen. Knox the confidential friend and advisor of Washington, and the head and front of the revolutionary artillery, is hardly named In the diagram of the scene, a place is given to his guns but his name and camp are not found while those of the other distinguished commanders are made conspicuous

This writer is not one who concurs in the appropriateness of selecting Gen Knox as a representative Maine man to be honored with a statue at the National Capital, for, excepting that our soil covers his ashes, he was never identified, particularly, with our local history He was more a Massachusetts than Maine man, born in Boston, in business there until entering the service, and generally reckoned as a patriot of the Bay State But, for all this, he performed invaluable service on the occasion referred to, the State authorities had adopted him as a representative man, and any article on the siege of Yorktown with that slight allusion to him is much like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out.

But the main point of this article is to direct enquiry in the ranks of the friends of the Historical Society to the special field of saving from oblivion the names and fame of those who laid the foundation of this commonwealth and performed a service which filial sons should always cherish with respect, and whose virtues cannot be imitated too closely. Two generations have passed since Maine became a State It is hardly too much to say that little is now known by the present of the fathers, or even their names, for little has been done to perpetuate them.
